MAY 18: OUR ANNUAL BANQUET & SILENT AUCTION, AND SCOTT WEIDENSAUL,
PRESENTING A PROGRAM ON HIS NEW BOOK,
“RETURN TO WILD AMERICA: A YEARLONG SEARCH FOR THE CONTINENT’S NATURAL SOUL”

THE PROGRAM:

“The In 1953, birding guru Roger Tory Peterson and noted British naturalist James Fisher set out on what became a legendary journey—a one hundred-day trek over 30,000 miles around North America. Two years later, Wild America, their classic account of the trip, was published. On the eve of that book’s fiftieth anniversary, naturalist Scott Weidensaul retraces Peterson and Fisher’s steps to tell the story of wild America today. How has the continent’s natural landscape changed over the past fifty years? How have the wildlife, the rivers, and the rugged, untouched terrain fared? The journey takes Weidensaul from the coastal communities of Newfoundland to the Smokies, to Florida, to the Sierra Madres, the Mexican tropics of Xilitla, the Pacific shore and the Bering Sea. Poised to become a classic in its own right, Return to Wild America is a sweeping survey of the natural soul of North America today.” [excerpts from book jacket; web]

Scott, no stranger to our chapter, is the author of more than two dozen books on natural history, and has written for Smithsonian magazine, Natural History, International Wildlife, Orion, Bird Watcher’s Digest and Audubon, among others. He lectures widely in the United States, and his photography and artwork have been published frequently in books and periodicals. Scott lives along the Kittatinny Ridge in eastern Pennsylvania. A licensed bird bander specializing in the study of hawk and owl migration, Scott has also pioneered research in Pennsylvania on the Saw-whet Owl.

PLEA, RE BREEDING BIRD ATLAS, by Ramsay Koury

I’ve written several articles over the past year about Pennsylvania’s Breeding Bird Atlas. If I haven’t convinced you to pick up your binoculars and find some birds, perhaps I can encourage you to help in another way. Many times while atlasing we see good habitat areas for birds, but the land is posted, “NO TRESPASSING.” If you, or a family member, or even the company where you work has LAND—e.g., a farm somewhere, a hunting camp in Perry County, other good birding habitat, and wouldn’t mind “citizen-scientist” birders checking it for birds, please let me know. Often good habitat areas go unexplored for breeding birds because we can’t access a property. We could even let you know what birds we find there (special species kept in confidence). If you know of breeding birds on such property, let us know that as well. Thanks!

THE MAY PROGRAM, BANQUET & SILENT AUCTION
MARK THE LAST PROGRAM OF OUR PROGRAM YEAR.
WE WISH YOU ALL A NATURE & BIRD-FILLED SUMMER!

HIGHLIGHTS FROM OUR STONEY CREEK INVASIVE PLANTS TRIP by Denna Claypool:

Walter Koerber, Gary Labelle, Joe Church and I met at Stoney Creek on April 9th and uprooted, poisoned or otherwise killed multiflora rose, white garlic mustard, Asian bittersweet, Asian Barberry and Ajileanthus. Not much was blooming except spicebush and some maples, but there were fiddleheads and small violet leaves emerging. Birds sighted or heard include turkey, phoebe, turkey vulture, blue-headed vireo, Carolina chickadee and cardinal. After several hours killing invasive plants we traveled up the main trail scouting out future sites, and saw the stone foundations of two of the old resort hotels that used to operate there. The ruins were attractive in their own way, with moss-covered stone masonry in remarkable shape, considering its years, but the sites were heavily populated by some of the biggest barberry bushes I’ve ever seen. We also saw the water neutralization plant from the main trail. If we don’t squeeze in another meeting this spring we’ll go back to Stoney Creek in the fall.

AUDUBON CHAPTER ASSEMBLY REPORT

Denna Claypool, Marcia Wilson and Ramsay Koury spent April 1st & 2nd at the statewide Audubon Chapter Conference in Valley Forge, where about 15 of the state's 21 chapters were represented. It was interesting to meet so many leaders from chapters around the state and learn about their activities. We got some great some new ideas for programs and field trips! We also heard speakers on Important Bird Areas, chapter-building and policy issues, like Wind Turbines and Deer Management; expect to hear more about these in the future. We had a good field trip to Heinz National Wildlife Refuge (Ticum) on Sunday morning. The event was very well-organized by PA Audubon and Valley Forge Audubon. However, the best part was meeting our fellow Auduboners from around the state!

"Forever Wild - 2006" Concert Continues to Grow

The 20th anniversary multi-media concert by long-distance, solo wilderness hiker Walkin’ Jim Stoltz, coming to our area this September, continues to gain support and momentum. Walkin’ Jim is a folk singer who plays guitar and harmonica and sings deep from his heart about the wild places and wild creatures he has seen on his long journeys in the backcountry. His concerts transport you to the wild places yourself, while you watch his outstanding nature images appear and disappear on the big screen. He is truly an inspiration and touches a place in our souls that allows us to feel that we, too, can make a difference in protecting our miraculous, natural world.

You will not want to miss this event, so mark your calendar and plan to be there. Remember, it is FREE admission, thanks to the co-sponsors, and seating is limited to the first 1,224! Hope to see you there!

Currently, eight different environmentally-focused local groups have joined forces as co-sponsors for this event. We, Appalachian Audubon Society, are the organizing sponsor, as well as providing financial support. Other sponsors to date are the Appalachian Trail Conservancy, the Bluebird Society of PA, the Gov. Pinchot Group of the Sierra Club, the Manada Conservancy, the Nature Conservancy in PA, the PA Parks & Forests Foundation, and Physicians for Social Responsibility. We expect about 25 groups with educational/informational displays in the lobby on concert night. Details will be published in the September issue of the Kingfisher. Visit www.foreverwild.info for regular updates about Walkin’ Jim and his national "Forever Wild -2006" tour, already in progress in the western states.

Audubon Pennsylvania: Great PA Clean-up — Local Important Bird Area

Pennsylvanians across the Commonwealth are cleaning up litter and trash on Important Bird Areas (IBAs) this spring. The PA Department of Environmental Protection is partnering with Audubon Pennsylvania to place a special emphasis on IBAs, to promote healthy bird habitat state-wide. The banks of the Susquehanna in Harrisburg are part of the Sheets Island Archipelago IBA, so Audubon PA is hosting a clean-up for the area on Sat., May 27th, 8 am to 1 pm. FREE parking will be available. We need volunteers to help with a birding station and the clean-up itself. If interested, please call Stacy Small at 717-213-6880, ext. 22. The event will take place between Forster and Division streets in Harrisburg, from the river's edge up to Susquehanna Street. Participants will meet in Riverfront Park at Front and Kelker streets; clean-up materials will be available. There will be a spotting scope for us to view wading birds and other species. Riverfront Park is part of the Susquehanna River Birding & Wildlife Trail; volunteers will receive a gift copy of the Trail guide. For details or to register, contact Stacy Small, Audubon PA Director of Bird Conservation, at 717-213-6880 ext. 22, or email: ssmall@audubon.org. For information about Audubon Pennsylvania and IBAs, visit http://pa.audubon.org/.

Since this is likely the last Kingfisher edition for the current Appalachian Audubon program year, I am going to do something different this month and touch briefly on several different subjects:

Backyard Wildlife Garden Field Trip, Postponed

The backyard wildlife field trip that I had proposed last year is being postponed for one more year, because I am organizing the “Forever Wild – 2006” concert with Walkin’ Jim Stoltz, coming to our area on September 23rd. I hope you will all come out for this exciting event. Hopefully we can reschedule the field trip for June 2007, so keep on planting those native plants and improving your wildlife habitat. E-mail me at mitandpak@aol.com when your property is certified by the National Wildlife Federation or is ready to have our AAS members visit your special backyard wildlife habitat.

Speaking of Native Plants…

The more we understand about the relationship between native plants and the way they support our native birds, beneficial insects, butterflies, moths and other wildlife, the more valuable and essential we understand these plants to be. Visit native plant sales and nursery sales this gardening season, but also ask your local nursery managers and plant buyers for native plants. Let them know that you are interested in using native plants. Garden centers will carry whatever will sell most readily, so we have to educate others about the value of native plants.

The “Invasive Dirty Dozen”

A new brochure has been published by the PA Dept. of Conservation & Natural Resources listing the top 12 worst plants for landscaping. Many of these are currently available to purchase at your local garden center, but these plants have proven to be invasive, meaning they will self-seed or spread rapidly to take over native habitat for wildlife. The twelve “dirty” plants are: Burning Bush (Euonymus alatus), Japanese Barberry (Berberis thunbergii), English Ivy (Hedera helix), Japanese Honeysuckle (Lonicera japonica), Butterfly Bush (Buddleia davidii), Norway Maple (Acer platanoides), Oriental Bittersweet (Celastrus orbiculatus), Autumn Olive (Elaeagnus umbellata), Bradford Pear (Pyrus calleryana), Japanese Stiltgrass (Microstegium vimineum), Tree of Heaven (Ailanthus altissima) and Privets (Ligustrum species.) The brochure lists native alternatives to use in place of these invasives. I will try to have some of these brochures available at the May 18th AAS banquet and program.

You might be surprised to see Butterfly Bush on that list, since it seems to be a great plant that does attract butterflies by the dozens. If you have this plant, please take the time to deadhead the blooms when they are faded and before the seeds have time to mature. In some areas, Butterfly Bush is now growing rampant as a woodland understory, taking over valuable habitat for our woodland wildlife.

Words of Inspiration

The following letter came to me over the Monarch Watch listserv. It appeared in the Record Newpaper in Kitchener, Canada, in early April. It was written by a nine-year-old girl named Mattea Haga. I couldn’t have said it better myself and hope the words will inspire you to make a difference, today and everyday. Have a great summer!

"Soon I will be turning 10 and what I want most for my birthday is to make a difference. I want to do something to save nature. I asked my friends not to bring birthday presents to my party, but instead help me adopt an owl by donating to the Long Point bird recovery program. I picked an owl because I am a "night owl."

I want to ask the mayor not to spray pesticides in our city. Did you know milkweed is the only plant the Monarch butterfly will lay its eggs on and the only food source that the Monarch caterpillars will eat? Don’t you think it’s strange that the Monarch butterfly is on the protected list because it is endangered but that the milkweed plant it needs to survive is still being sprayed? Now does that really make any sense?

If we all did just one small thing each and every day to make the world a better place, what a difference we could make. So think of something you can do today to make the world a better place; maybe it’s as simple as a smile or a kind word. Maybe it’s volunteering time or donating money. Whatever it is, big or small, it does make a difference. It’s not so important what you do, but that you actually do something.

It would be nice if there were space in the newspaper for kids to write in about what they are doing to "nurture nature." I am sure there are lots of kids doing great things."
